Why Does United Airlines Offer Discounts on Specific Days?

Airline pricing works on supply and demand. Since weekends and Mondays see the highest number of bookings, prices are higher. By contrast, mid-week (Tuesday and Wednesday) often has fewer reservations, so airlines reduce costs to fill up seats. Offering discounts ensures that planes are flying fuller, which benefits both the airline and the passengers who get cheaper tickets. Saturdays also become discount days because most families or business travelers avoid traveling then, again leaving more empty seats.

By planning ahead and keeping track of these patterns, you can secure the lowest fares. When in doubt, you can always confirm offers by calling United Airlines at   ++1-855-7676-226 and asking about updated discount days.
